Note: This codebook corresponds to the datafile experts_130111.dta. Cases in the datafile are organized at the level of "party-dimension" which corresponds to party-specific questions asked of experts covering 301 parties from 39 countries (see variable "DIMENSION"). These expert survey data were collected from January-April 2009. Values for all other variables, measured at the party- or country-level entered in repeated rows as necessary to match up with the "DIMENSION" variable.

DIMENSION

This variable includes a total of 14 dimensions of analysis of each individual party. Values 1 through 14 correspond to the following dimensions:

1. Left-right: dimension reflecting the broad ideology of the party leadership. Respondents were presented a set of parties relevant for the country they specialize in and they were asked the following question: "We would like to start by asking you to characterize the parties in terms of their broad ideological stances on a general left-right dimension. On the scale below, 0 indicates that a party is at the extreme left of the ideological spectrum, 10 indicates that it is at the extreme right, and 5 means that it is at the centre. Please indicate the location of each party on a general left-right dimension, taking all aspects of party policy into account."

2. Social: dimension measuring party leadership position on social policy. Respondents were asked, "Another way parties are sometimes classified is in terms of their views on social policy. Some parties favour liberal policies on matters such as abortion, homosexuality, and euthanasia. Other parties oppose these policies. Others are located somewhere between these extremes. Using these criteria, on the scale below please indicate where the parties are located on questions of social policy, where 0 indicates strong preferences in favour of liberal policies on matters like abortion, homosexuality, and euthanasia and 10 indicates strong opposition to these policies."
3. Immigration: dimension reflecting party leadership position on immigration and asylum. The question was worded, "Next consider the issue of immigration. Some political parties favour policies designed to help immigrants and asylum seekers integrate into the [Country] society. Other parties favour policies designed to help immigrants and asylum seekers return to their country of origin. Still others are located somewhere between these extremes. Using these criteria, please indicate where the parties are located on questions of immigration policy, where 0 indicates strong preferences for helping immigrants and asylum seekers integrate into society and 10 indicates strong preferences for helping immigrants and asylum seekers return to their country of origin."
4. Trade: measures party leadership position on trade, with the question worded, "Next consider positions on the international economy. Some parties are strong supporters of free trade as a means to increase exports and consumer choice. Other parties favour protectionist policies to protect national industry. Others lie somewhere in the middle of these views. For each party, please tick the number that corresponds to the statement that, in your mind, best describes the position toward free trade that the party's leadership has taken over the course of 2008, where 0 indicates that party is strongly in favour of protectionism and 10 indicates that party is strongly in favour of free trade. Please, tick only one number."
5. Tax-Spend (Before): reflects party leadership position on taxes versus spending at the beginning of 2008. Respondents were asked, "Next we would like to ask you about fiscal policy. Some political parties feel it is important for the government to provide many more services even if it means an increase in spending. Other parties think the government should provide fewer services even in areas such as health and education in order to reduce spending. Still others are located somewhere between these extremes. Using these criteria, please indicate where the parties were located at the beginning of 2008 on questions of tax and spend, where 0 indicates strong preferences for raising taxes and increasing spending on services and 10 indicates strong preferences for cutting taxes and spending less on services."
6. Tax-Spend (After): reflects leadership party position on taxes versus spending at the end of 2008 with the question, "Some parties may have changed their position on fiscal policy during the course of 2008."

Below, please indicate where the parties were located at the end of 2008 on questions of tax and spend."

7. Privatisation (Before): measures party leadership position on the government's role in the economy at the beginning of 2008. The question was worded, "Next, we would like to ask you about the government's role in the economy. Some parties favour granting broad capacity to the government to regulate and even own business and industry. Other parties oppose regulation and nationalisation and instead favour the free market and private ownership of industry. Still others are located somewhere between these extremes. Using these criteria, please indicate where the parties were located at the beginning of 2008 on questions of government involvement in the economy, where 0 indicates strong preferences for nationalisation and regulation and 10 indicates strong preferences for privatisation and free market economics."
8. Privatisation (After): measures party leadership position on the government's role in the economy at the end of 2008. Respondents were asked, "Some parties may have changed their position on the government's role in the economy during the course of 2008. Below, please indicate where the parties were located at the end of 2008 on questions of the government's role in the economy."
9. Government Constraint: assesses party leadership's opinion about the government's room to maneuver due to globalization, with the following question: "Opinions differ in terms of the connection between economic globalisation and policymaking in individual countries. Thinking in terms of each political party, is globalisation of the economy believed to leave the [Country] government with 1. a great deal, 2. quite a lot, 3. not very much, or 4. hardly any room to make its own decisions about its economic policies (4 point scale)? Please tick the answer that corresponds to the view of each party."
10. Coordination- Regulation: dimension measuring the party leadership's position toward international coordination or national regulation. Respondents were asked, "In the aftermath of the recent international financial crisis, some have advocated greater international coordination in financial regulation, while others have advocated that each country reform its own regulatory structures. Still others are located somewhere between these extremes. For each party, please tick the number that corresponds to the statement that, in your mind, best describes its position toward international coordination or national regulation in the aftermath of the international financial crisis where 0 indicates that party is strongly in favour of national regulation and 10 indicates party is strongly in favour of international coordination."
11. Globalisation (Before): assesses party leadership's overall orientation toward globalization at the beginning of 2008. Respondents were asked, "In your opinion, what is the overall orientation of each political party toward the consequences of globalisation? For each party, please tick the number that corresponds to the statement that, in your mind, best describes its overall orientation toward the consequences of globalisation at the beginning of 2008, where 0 indicates strongly opposed to economic globalisation and 10 indicates strongly in favour of economic globalization."

12. Globalisation (After): assesses party leadership's overall orientation toward globalization at the end of 2008. Respondents were asked, "Some parties may have changed their position on the consequences of globalisation during the course of 2008. Below, please indicate where the parties were located at the end of 2008 on the issue of globalisation."
13. Dissent: dimension assessing the level of dissent within each party about globalization, with the question worded, "How much internal dissent has there been in the various political parties in [Country] on the issue of globalisation of the economy in 2008? 1. Complete unity, 2. Minor dissent, 3. Significant dissent, 4. Party evenly split on issue, 5. Leadership position opposed by a majority of party activists (5 point scale). Please tick one response for each party listed."
14. Globalisation Salience: dimension measuring the salience of globalization for political parties. Respondents were asked, "Next, we would like you to think about the salience of globalisation to the political parties in [Country]. During 2008, how important has the world economy been to the parties in their public stance? 1. Globalization is of no importance at all, 2. Globalization is of little importance, 3. Globalization is of some importance, 4. Globalization is of great importance." Please, tick the appropriate response for each party."

MEAN

Mean value of expert responses for each party on the dimension.

SD

Standard deviation value of expert responses for each party on the dimension.

N

The number of experts providing a response for each question. Excludes "don't know" responses.

GLDB1

Country-level variable measuring the salience of globalization in political debate at the beginning of 2008. Respondents were asked, "In this section we would like to ask you about economic globalisation, defined as the free movement of goods, people, and services across national borders.
